

SESSIONAL CLINICAL LECTURER

The Leslie Dan Faculty of Pharmacy, University of Toronto, invites applications for the position of Sessional Clinical Lecturer for a mandatory course, Physical Assessment and Injections (PHM230), which is scheduled in the winter term of the second year of the Doctor of Pharmacy (PharmD) program. The position is offered from November 1, 2017 until May 31, 2018.

This 39 hour course provides students with an introduction to physical assessment of patients. A key component of a pharmacist's ability to identify, resolve and prevent drug therapy problems is to assess a patient's health and medication related needs. Patient assessment includes a physical assessment to determine the effectiveness and safety of drug therapy. In addition to enabling students to gain the required physical assessment skills for pharmacists, the course also provides education pertaining to the administration of substances by injection. Students engage in lectures, on-line activities, and skills practice in a laboratory setting. This course includes a module pertaining to the administration of substances by injection that allows students to meet the competencies required by the Public Health Agency of Canada and the Ontario College of Pharmacists.

The expected enrollment for this course is 240 students. Teaching assistant support is provided to support assessment and small group activities.

Applicants should be a health care professional (e.g. nurse, pharmacist, physician, physician assistant) licensed or certified as appropriate for the given profession. Candidates must have experience working in a clinical practice setting within the Canadian Health Care system. The successful individual must demonstrate excellence in teaching, currently practice in, and demonstrate a strong knowledge of the relevant field, and, possess excellent organization and communication skills. Experience in the development and delivery of courses is an asset.
